AISC Offers Flexible Training Opportunities

The American Institute of Steel Construction (AISC) is dedicated to providing a variety of steel-related, continuing education opportunities. Whether the seminar is brought to a city near you, to your company, or to your laptop, there are several options to match your needs.

AISC's In-Person Seminar series offers a variety of steel topics that are presented in many cities across the United States. These seminars can also be presented at your company or organization by top professionals and professors in the structural engineering field.

If you cannot attend a seminar, AISC offer live, interactive webinars, which are ideal for staying current on relevant industry subjects while participating from your office and receiving CEUs/PDHs for attendance. AISC also provides recorded webinars and articles with CEUs/PDHs available to participants taking quizzes at the end of each learning session.

As of January 2013, AISC offers a new education program called Night School. The webinars will be a curriculum of courses studying structural steel design and construction topics. Learn more at <http://www.aisc.org/content.aspx?id=32578>.
